Illinois and lowa Items.

To the Editor of THE BEE:

Turning eastward for a brief tour, your orrespondent stepped across the border line of our great and growing state of Nebraska to pick up some items of intererest scattered here and there through Iowa and Illinois. In contrast we are free to presume that our fresh and young sixteen suffers nothing when the comparison is instituted with her older sisters, whose home land lies further toward the duty. He said the republican party, berising sun. Our line of travel was along ing the dominent one, is to blame for rising sun. Our line of travel was along the great Northwestern railway, whose immense traffic has largely been enhanced by the products furnished on the western side of the famous Muddy. Cattle, hogs, corn and the smaller grains, all destined for the Chicago and New York markets, come pouring along in unstinted measure and quality, and we might add quality as well, showing conclusively the almost unlimited producing capacity of this newly opened state Towns in Iowa, which a few years ago were all astir with the hum of business and growth, are fast assuming habits of quietness and a maturity of expansion which has been forced upon them by the enthusiastic interest springing up for the the west. Dunlap, Denison, Iowa City and Marshalltown, whilst retaining a strong hold upon their saveral common truckle to the party in power as truckle to the party in power and that the party in power as truckle to the party in power and that the party in power as truckle to the party in power and that day, counted seven open bar-reoms—open in every sense of the word—and he saw from the street men drinking in the saveral counter that day, counted seven open bar-reoms—open in every sense of the word—and he saw from the strong hold upon their several commer. truckle to the party in power. Clinton nestled close to the edge of the BOOK, PAPERS, WRITING deep and majestic Mississippi still holds the championship in the lumber interests and depends largely on Nebraska patronage to relieve her of her large supplies.

And whilst we feel kindly towards her for And whilst we feel kindly towards her for the generous supplies of this needed material out of what to construct our houses, build our fences and supply our vast ranches with shed protection for our herds of stock, yet we cannot conceal our convinction that Clinton has pleasant thoughts reaching out to Nebraska because of the handsome prices received for her accumulated stores of material.

Crossing the great Father of Waters, we entered the attractive and beautiful Rock River valley. far and wide over the state.

In Chicago we were not more surprised with the undiminished hum and activity in business circles than we were with the continued expansion of this vast city of the lakes, giving assurance to the presumption that no one can tell to what extent this national metropolis may still grow. But even Chicago in her greatness, counts much on the patronage which comes to her from Nebraska's increasing products. Many inquiries were made of your correspondent concerning the wonderful state of Nebraska, comprising so largely the great American desert, and now opaning in rich fields, tringing in the bounteous harvests for Chicago warehouses.

"What class of prisoners are the best workmen? The burglars—especially those who have been engaged in robbing safes—are by all odds the best. It seems a queer thing to say, but I am always pleased when a bank burglar is sentenced to state prison. I am quite sure them that he will be a good workman. Four bank burglars were recently sentenced from Fairfield county. I am now en the lookout for their arrival."

From the Boston Herald.

The searchers after Captain Kied's treasures continue their investigations along the beach at Winthrop Highlands, and coins to the value of $300 have been far and wide over the state.

Great interest is manifested in the growth of Omaha, which is now looked upon as one of the rising cities of this great nation. The confidence of business men in her future is expressed in strong terms. Her patronage and influence are sold several at sums varying from $5 to eagerly sought as an essential factor m $15. The most valuable find yet was building up their own great interests. The abundant crops for the past two years in Nebraska, the steady and somewhat phenomenal growth of business in her several towns and cities have widely advertised our state in the favor of a vast. number who no longer look upon the effort to build up a pruminent state west of the Missouri as a mere experiment.

The coins found thus far were within a space of seventy feet square, and about 100 feet below high water mark. the Missouri as a mere experiment. Those who have a foothold in Nebraska may well feel thankful in view of their Temperance in Maine.

From the Hartford Times, Some of the intemperate temperance Farnam street storm-water sewer was let men of Maine have just been holding an annual meeting at Augusta. They are organized as the "Maine State Temperance society," and they have held annual and have purposely influenced the legislation of the state on the question of liof the temperance cause and their utterances will plainly show what kind of men it has for leaders and directors in the Pine-tree state as well as how it has flourished under their fostering care, backed by all the law they desired to have placed on the statute books.

One of the speakers at this annual meeting, Colonel W. T. Eustiss, who was their last caudidate for governor, laid the blame for the non-enforcement of the law upon the officers, who failed to do their this; that that party is "in league and full sympathy with the rum power in the state and nation." He said that once there was a public sentiment sustaining the officers in doing their duty; but to day that sentiment is wanting. No man when elected to office, no matter how pure his temperance views, had gone any further in the execution of the liquor law than the party which stood behind him, whether police officer, county attorwere all astir with the hum of business ney, governor or president. His remarks were received with eclipsing Illinois in many respects, are being brought up to a high state of culville, said the blame lay largely with the prosecuting officers, and they were guilty of perjury in neglecting to prosecute offenders. The records would show county attorneys and municipal judges to be "guilty of complicity in crime with rum sellers. It is quite customary," he said, "for these officials to settle with offenders for $100, when under the law they

the great piles of uncribbed coyn and crowded bins of grain in Nebraska are the refreshing exponents of the prosperity which crowned our state during the past two years. Cedar Rapids is pushing on with all her might to become the metropolitan inland city of Iowa. And there seems to be little room for doubt in the successful accomplishment of this aim. In manufacturing interests and an even colleges, and church enterprise, this flourishing city presents many attractions to business enterprise and home-seekers as they are passing to and fro in the land to-day. And yet compared with our own Omaha with her growing industries, with her network of railways, her increased manufacturing facilities, with her grace and hearing restored, and ravages checked.

The Rev. Mr. Haskell, of Damaris-cotta, said that for the "past ten years the years of all druggies, of Seleg, etc., cured.

The knew whereof he affirmed.

"The sheriff, the county attorneys and all the officers who ought to enforce the law, are combined to protect the rumseller. The liquor traffic is constantly increasing in the state, commencing in the east and working rapidly towards the west." There are twenty five young men in his town that were addicted to drinking where there was one seventeen years ago.

Mr. Burke, of Somerset county, said that for the "past ten years to business enterprise and home-seekers and an expounded business in her schools and to-day. Joshua Nye, of Augusta, the great apostle of prohibition, said that Congressman Dingley's statement that there was no liquor-selling in many of the towns of the state, was "a fraud, a delusion and a humbug;" liquor selling was terribly on the increase all over the state, and every woman and child in the state knows it. Last Sunday two sleigh loads of people left this city, purchasing rum at a drug store, and starting for West Waterville.

With a background of several thousand acres of timber land, and with an outlook southward upon this finest panorama of fertile prairies, with strong business and commercial interests, schools, churches and handsome dwellings, we felt that any one might be content to claim such a spot as his home.

From this Nebraska hasdrawnone of the members of the prosperous business firm of Dewey & Stone, the State Superindent of Missions, Rev. Crissman, Robertson Bros., bankers, Cleveland, Wallace Psyne, and a host of others scattered far and wide over the state.
